by Pappelina

Roll out this runner rug, woven using strands of a durable PVC-polyester blend, to add some texture and warmth to the concrete.

Ambient Sol by Gloster
This seven-foot-seven-inch wicker lamp splays out shade that rivals a beach umbrella during the day. Come nightfall, it provides a radiant glow that'll have guests feting for hours.

Dreams Outdoor Kitchen
by Miele

Why cook inside when the outdoor kitchen is even better? With Miele's modular kitchen, you can cherry-pick the features you want, like gas grills, a fridge, or more cabinets.

Petit Rond Stool by Troels Grum-Schwensen
for Frama

Go ahead and throw a rager. Just be sure to have a stash of these stackable steel stools on hand: You'll rest assured that overflow guests will have a place to park it.

Phil Kitchen Sink Module

for Ethimo

This sink module allows you to wash produce or prepare cocktails all in one place. Serve drinks and appetizers atop the attached floating surface.

ALFRESCO ENTERTAINING

There's something about open-air cooking and dining that reshapes the senses. The meals smell more rustic, the drinks taste more refreshing. Grills have long been the staple for cookouts, but these days, entire outdoor kitchen setups make preparing and plating entrees and appetizers on-site look easy. Complete the dining scene with beautiful lighting, and you'll have the elements for hosting an enviable dinner party. Tell your guests to resist the urge to post—it's time to enjoy the moment.
