

SUNBRELLA® RENAISSANCE YARNS

Decades before today's green movement, Sunbrella fabrics made a corporate commitment to environmentally responsible practices. Through a fabric's early lifecycle, there is inevitable waste from cutting tables of various customers, as well as excess fiber, yarn and fabric from the Sunbrella manufacturing facility. Sunbrella took on the challenge of finding this waste a new purpose – and the Renaissance yarn program was born.

Renaissance yarns combine up to 50% of this postindustrial recycled Sunbrella fiber. The waste is segmented into color groups, reduced back to its fiber state and then mixed with Sunbrella virgin fiber before making its way through the manufacturing process. The virgin fiber blend helps ensure that the product meets stringent Sunbrella performance standards.

Due to the nature of the recycled content, Sunbrella Renaissance yarns may exhibit random color specks and shade variation. These slubs can sometimes be a contrasting color, adding to the visual interest of the fabric. The result is a textile with vintage charm, rich coloration, soft feel, and excellent performance.
